

Tax the Millionaire

(Blowin' in the Wind by Bob Dylan)

new words by Bonnie Lockhart

How many billions must some people have,

before they will pay a fair tax?

Yes, and how many teachers were laid off this year in ever-increasing cutbacks?

Yes, and how many pensions will public servants lose,

in well-funded corporate attacks?

The answer is fair, it's tax the millionaire

The answer is tax the millionaire

How many mansions must one man have, before he's required to share?

Yes, and how many people are homeless tonight,

as shelters go broke everywhere?

Yes, and how many times will the CEO brag,

it's his right to remain a billionaire?

The answer is fair, it's tax the millionaire

The answer is tax the millionaire

How many lawyers will Chase Bank employ, to make sure their tax is deferred?

Yes, and how many books will the B of A cook,

so their tax-free condition's assured?

Yes, and how many loopholes will Wells Fargo find,

while their profits from jails are absurd?

The answer is fair, it's tax the millionaire

The answer is tax the millionaire
